Agreement seen as mutually beneficial

Compact in motion to expand tribal, state revenues

Oklahoma Gov. Brad Henry announced Jan. 21 that state and tribal officials have reached agreement on a gaming compact that will increase revenues for tribes, the state and the state horse racing industry.

Under the proposed agreement, tribes would be able to operate non-class II electronic games and card games, and three Oklahoma race tracks would be allowed to offer electronic games similar to those operated by tribes. The State of Oklahoma is expected to reap about $71 million in revenue the first full year of operation under the agreement, according to Shawn Ashley, a public information officer for the Office of State Finance.

“A lot of hard work has gone into crafting an agreement that benefits everyone involved,” said Gov. Bill Anoatubby. “This plan not only provides more revenue for education and other important services provided by the tribes and the state, it will also bolster the horse racing industry, hopefully preventing the loss of more Oklahoma jobs.”

While Gov. Henry, tribal leaders and horse racing representatives are in agreement, state lawmakers must approve Senate Bill 553 to put the plan into action.

While a similar bill was rejected last year by the Oklahoma legislature, Bob Rabon, the attorney representing the Chickasaw and Choctaw nations, said the composition of the legislature and other factors make passage of the measure more likely this year.

“This time, we’ve got both major newspapers supporting it,” Rabon said. “The stories they have been pretty positive.”

A Jan. 21 story in the Daily Oklahoman, the largest circulation newspaper in the state, led with an indirect quote from Gov. Henry stating “Everyone’s a winner in the gaming agreement.” A Jan. 22 editorial in the Tulsa World called the agreement “a major step in the right direction.”

Gov. Henry calls the legislation a “win-win” for Oklahoma.

“This legislation will help save jobs and produce new funding for education,” said Gov. Henry. “It will save one industry - the horse industry - and allow the state to regulate and share in the revenue of another - tribal gaming. It will provide a boost to the economy and state revenues.”

While the compact is expected to bring the state approximately $16 million from electronic games at race tracks and $55 million from tribal gaming operations, it will also increase net revenues for tribes, according to Rabon.

“I think it will greatly increase play at casinos, and therefore increase revenues,” said Rabon. “These games are going to be much more attractive to the people who like to play that kind of game than what you have now, probably.”

Compact revenues will only be paid to the state on non-class II games - three electronic games and one card game - included in the compact agreement. The See Gaming Compact, page 12

New Year’s first arrival

The first baby of 2004, Asta Clint Cameron, with parents Tyralese and Chad Cameron.

ADA, Okla.: Along with the New Year came a new arrival for one local family. Tyralese and Chad Cameron of Ada welcomed a baby boy at Carl Albert Indian Health Facility Jan. 2 at 8:48 a.m. Dr. Charles E. Whiting delivered Asta Clint Cameron, Carl Albert’s first baby of the New Year.

Asta weighed in at 5 lbs., 13.8 ounces, and measured 18.7 inches. He is the Camerons’ second child. He is welcomed by two-year-old sister, Hannah Penelope.

The family’s Native American heritage is Seminole, Creek and Navajo. Asta is the Navajo word for eagle.

CAHF gave the Camerons a car seat, clothing and personal care items for the baby. Contributed by Dena Drabek, tribal media relations.
Tribe set to restore Ada’s historic McSwain Theatre

ADA, Okla. - The McSwain Theatre in downtown Ada has been through many changes in its 84 years. It’s about to undergo a few more.

The Chickasaw Nation is planning to renovate the McSwain Theatre in downtown Ada, Okla. Plans include expanding the stage, adding more seats, installing a new lighting and sound system, remodeling the lobby and restoring the original theatre front, expanding the lobby, and replacing the original theatre front.

The improvements we are making to the theatre will help contribute to the revitalization of downtown Adam,” Chickasaw Nation Gov. Bill Anoatubby said. “The McSwain is a landmark, and we want it to be a venue that we all can be proud of for years to come.”

McSwain manager Sheilla Brashier said the tribe is completing the renovation in part to attract more live performances and productions to Ada. The goal is to provide the community with a public venue that can be used for a variety of events.

Since the Chickasaw Nation purchased the theatre in 2002, it has been used for pageants, awards ceremonies, musical performances and community service events.

Crowds drawn in by entertainment of all sorts have flocked to the McSwain since it opened in 1920. In its early years, vaudeville performers took to the stage, Brashier said. Later, the McSwain became a movie theatre, showing silent films in the beginning.

At the height of its movie success, the theatre was lost to the 1948 world premiere of the film “Tulsa” starring Susan Hayward and Robert Preston.

Plans to show movies in the theatre have resurfaced in the present day. Brashier said there has been talk of offering a Saturday matinee once renovation is complete.

The theatre will still be home to local country music groups, the McSwingers, who have performed the first and third Saturdays of each month since 1991.

While some of the nostalgia of the McSwain will live on, when the theatre reopens it won’t be quite the same. The tribe has purchased the building to the east of the theatre, which will likely be used for expansion of the McSwain. Brashier said a second story may even be added to the building.

Renovations are expected to take about one year.

Tribe’s sovereign status creates negotiation

Government-to-government relationship essential

By BILL ANOATUBBY
Governor Chickasaw Nation

In our storied and unique history as the Chickasaw Nation, we have passed through many times of challenge. Our tribal history, and how we “fit” with the history of the United States, has led us to where we are today.

The Chickasaw Nation, like the many other tribes at the time of contact, was governing itself. During the treaty period, the tribes, including the Chickasaw Nation, relinquished certain rights in exchange for promises by the federal government.
These treaties established the trust responsibility. This trust is the federal government’s obligation to honor the trust inherent in the promises and represent the best interests of the tribes and their citizens.

There has, of course, been much water under the bridge since the time of treaty-making. Indian tribes, including our own, have endured federal Indian pol-ic which has, at times, sought the actual elimination of tribes.

During the last century, different administrations have interacted with tribes in widely differing ways. The pendulum of Indian policy has produced a very wide arc during that time.

We have, over the past decade or so, entered a period in which the tribal relationship with the federal government is, for the most part, positive. It has been a very long road. However, the Chickasaw Nation and other leadership tribes have worked very hard to educate Members of Congress regarding Indian sovereignty and the mutual benefit of allowing tribes to govern themselves pragmatically.

We are citizens of the Chickasaw Nation and of the United States, and to Chickasaws that is a very plain and straightforward fact. Our dual citizenship reflects the unique and wonderful history of our tribe and establishes how we honor our past, and build our future.

In addition to our federal relationship, the Chickasaw Nation
also interacts with the state of Oklahoma. There is no trust re-
tionship, the Chickasaw Nation and the state of

We are currently in the process of negotiating a specific gaming compact with the state that we believe will be in the best interest of everyone. We believe the best agreements are those that leave all sides on the winning

Our hard-won, unique status as the Chickasaw Nation is both a blessing and a responsibility.
We are completely committed to our tribal sovereignty, and we realize we must work diligently with other governments to resolve important issues. The Chickasaw Nation is pleased to be a national leader on Indian issues that affect not just Chickasaws, but Indian people across the country.

Gov. Bill Anoatubby

The Chickasaw Nation JOM program recently conducted an art contest. The winners were: first place Tia Wines of Calera High School; second place Kasey Bridewell of Silo High School; third place Whitney McCauley of Comanche High School; and fourth place Chase Wallace of Davis High School.
Winter baseball camp ‘awesome’ for Chickasaw boys

The holidays are over and we are settling into a new year with incredible new adventures at every corner. It is wonderfully exciting to witness and be a part of the progress going on in the Nation at this time. I cannot let the holidays go, though, without sharing with you one of the most rewarding events of the entire holiday season! It was the baseball camp held three days before Christmas at Ardmore for the youth. Originally the plan was for the camp to be open to all Native American boys ages 8 through 18 with a projection that probably there would be about 100 boys. However, applications were received in very short order from 122 Chickasaw boys alone, so plans were changed to include just the Chickasaw boys for all of them to be included. It was a two-day camp and the credentials of the coaches and players who came in to work with the boys fit the favorite term of “Awesome” in a grand manner. The head baseball coach from the University of Oklahoma was there, the coach of the Texas Rangers and pitchers from several of the other major league teams were there. It was virtually a who’s who of talent offered to our youth. And the thrill and enjoyment of the boys at meeting and working with the professionals was worth all the work from the employees of the Education Department who put on the event, and this comes from those who have not attended.

The Education Department is especially to be commended for their efforts and all the myriad things they do for the youth of the Chickasaw Nation. Last summer they did the Space Camp and had almost 100 youth in attendance, the very first time the camp was held!

At the present time the Education Department is holding a College and Career Day at Murray State College in conjunction with that college. Murray State is always cooperative with our efforts toward the education of our citizens both young and those not as young as they once were! We appreciate the efforts of all the higher learning institutions in Chickasawland and are so fortunate to have a number of them, including extraordinary youth schools with an amazing array of career training classes.

Our Education Department awarded almost $2 million in grants and scholarships last year and anticipates an increase this year. It is possible for a graduating senior with a high GPA to be the recipient of as much as $4,100 a year and not unusual for a senior to receive an amount exceeding $3,000 a year. It is also now part of the educational opportunities for our citizens to receive assistance when they are attending school on a part time basis. And these opportunities are not just for Chickasaws living within the boundaries of the Nation. All Chickasaws have the opportunity, so call, write or e-mail for an application if you are interested in the programs offered.

We in the Legislature are honored and privileged to be a part of this worthy - the education of Chickasaws! And most appreciative of the administering of the programs offered by our resolutions. To all of you I wish the best year you can envision for yourselves and always I pray God’s blessings on each and all of you.

Chickasaw Foundation serves Chickasaw people

The foundation sponsors several programs including Kid’s Kafe, a meal program at Carter Seminary in Ardmore, Okla.; the training component of the Computer Literacy and Distribution program through a grant provided by the Microsoft Corporation; an emergency food distribution program by the Oklahoma Arts Council; partial funding of the Chickasaw Nation Festival and Annual Meeting celebration by the Oklahoma Arts Council, and the ZOO FUNd grant that sponsors Chickasaw youth groups throughout the Oklahoma Zoological Society.

The Chickasaw Foundation is a great place to find an educational scholarship. The foundation is currently revising its scholarship application form and will be offering the following scholarships for fall 2004:

- Colbert “Bud” Baker Scholarship
- Gene & Sonam Hill Computer Corporation Scholarship
- Ann Eubank Health Scholarship
- Junet Shales James Memorial Scholarship
- Edward L. Kruger Memorial Ittish Assiisha Scholarship
- Native American Fund Advisors Scholarship
- Bank2 Ta-ossi-a-usha Scholarship
- Bank2 Banking Scholarship In Memory of Mr. Robert Walton

- Native American Women’s Entrepreneurial Scholarship
- Donald D. Gunning Memorial Scholarship
- Chickasaw Foundation General Purpose Education Scholarship
- Mary K. Moreland & Daniel L. Walton Scholarship
- Robert L. Walton Scholarship

The Chickasaw Foundation Upward Bound program provides a six-week, residential summer program at Murray State College in Tishomingo, Okla. Upward Bound students are much more likely to enroll in postsecondary education following Upward Bound.

The Chickasaw Foundation Educational Talent Search (ETS) program, also at Murray State College, offers students in sixth through 12th grade a chance to attend college in 2003. This year, a high percentage of ETS seniors went on to attend college in 2003. This year, a high percentage of ETS seniors have already begun making college plans.

The Chickasaw Foundation hosts several special events throughout the year. These include a scholarship reception, the Friends of the Foundation reception, an annual Open House and the Cultural Evening to honor individuals, organizations and the overall culture of the Chickasaw people.

For more information about the Chickasaw Foundation’s programs, please visit the foundation offices at 110 West 12th Street, Ada, Okla., or call (580) 421-9030.

Health System focused on efficiency, exceptional patient care

Mary Jo Green

Chickasaw Tribal Legislature

Greetings from Legislator Mary Jo Green, Seat 5, Pontotoc District!

It is my distinct honor and pleasure to serve as this year’s Health Care Committee Chairman for the Tribal Legislature. The Administrator of the Chickasaw Health System, Bill Lance, attended the Committee’s January meeting and gave a Power-Point presentation regarding the Health System. I am delighted to inform you that the Health System continues to improve its efficiency and employ many improvements in technology, such as new equipment to monitor heart patients, in order to provide increased services to more Indian people.

Our Health System strives to give the best health care services of any Indian health facility in the United States with the vision of “Healthy American Indians through informed choices and excellent health services;” and we are succeeding. Mr. Lance introduced us to Lisa Bumpus from Sulphur who now serves as the Director of Outcome Management for the Health System. We are truly fortunate as the Director of Outcome Management for the Health System.

We are especially excited about our new diabetic clinic opening sometime in February and the healthy lifestyles center shortly after that. These two facilities will be very important for us to address major medical needs in the areas of diabetes and preventive medicine for Indian people.

I also serve on the Human Resources, Land Development and Education Committees of the Tribal Legislature this year and invite any comments or questions you may have. Please contact me through the address and telephone number listed elsewhere in this and every issue of the Chickasaw Times. I look forward to speaking with you! Thank you.
Much Indian legislation still being considered

Election year promises lots of energy - and a bumpy ride!

By CHARLES BLACKWELL
Chickasaw Ambassador to the United States

2004 is a leap year, an Olympic year and an election year! It began in a state of orange alert and today, the 2nd Session of the 108th Congress opens and the President launches his campaign for re-election with the State of the Union Address. Clearly, it's going to be a full of energy, action, talk, and lots of bumps!

Congress was decidedly busy during the 1st Session and is expected to be so during the 2nd Session, especially since it is an important election year. Partisanship in Congress increases dramatically in election years so I predict a bumpy ride over the next ten months. The House and Senate wrapped up the 1st Session of this Congress with unfinished business. They closed shop for the Christmas recess, passing a flurry of measures on unanimous consent but failing to reach consensus on the $328 billion catchall Omnibus Appropriations Bill for FY 2004. Therefore, the Omnibus Appropriations Bill will be the first order of business for the 2nd Session; perhaps it will be voted out today. If not today, surely soon.

On November 25, final agreement was reached on the FY 2004 Agriculture Appropriations Bill which became the Omnibus bill for the seven remaining FY 2004 Appropriations Bills including Commerce/Justice/State, the District of Columbia, Foreign Operations, Labor/Health and Human Services/Education, Transportation/Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development and Treasury. The omnibus conference report contains some new provisions for bill language related to American Indian programs. In addition, the final section provides for miscellaneous appropriations and offsets. It directs a 0.59% across-the-board reduction in all discretionary spending in the FY 2004 Appropriations Acts, including the FY 2004 Interior Appropriations Act (Public Law 108-108). This across-the-board reduction does not apply to the FY 2004 Supplemental Appropriations Act, the FY 2004 Defense Appropriations Act or the FY 2004 Military Construction Appropriations Act. The consolidated spending bill contains a variety of tribal earmarks within several different federal programs. Several provisions in the omnibus spending bill also adversely affect tribes — particularly those in Alaska. On December 8, the House of Representatives adopted the omnibus appropriations conference report by a vote of 242-176. On December 9, Senate leaders delayed final consideration of the fiscal 2004 omnibus appropriations package until now, i.e. late January/early February, in an effort to resolve some actions for action from the White House.

The latest Continuing Resolution keeps federal agencies funded until January 31 which is only two days before the Administration expects to release its proposed budget for FY 2005. The fiscal year always begins in October of the previous year, so in this case, they are planning the budget for October 2004 and February 2005. The inevitable leaks from the Administration regarding the FY 2005 budget suggest it includes another attempt to rein in discretionary spending, holding it to a 3 percent boost: this will be a very difficult task in an election year! In reality, getting the process done in time for an early October election-year adjournment may be the biggest hurdle facing lawmakers. Then again, it is an election year and who knows what will happen — just another bump.

"Back to today, Congress is expected to take up several issues affecting Indian tribes in the 2nd Session. The Senate will again consider the conference report for the Energy Policy Act of 2003, which contains a detailed section on Indian energy. The conference report was written by the members of the House and Senate Committees that work on energy issues and represents their compromises. The House passed the conference bill in late 2003 but the Senate failed to reach consensus. Rumor has it that two pivotal senators have agreed to passing the Energy bill creating speculation it may move very quickly. I believe the House and Senate have already held numerous hearings on this subject and, yet, additional ones are expected in 2004. Further, the Native American Alcohol and Substance Abuse Program Consolidation Act of 2002 has passed the Senate and is currently being considered by the House. This bill authorizes tribes to consolidate administrative functions and certain others for tribal alcohol and substance abuse programs and reauthorizes the Indian Alcohol and Substance Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act of 1986. The Senate has also passed the bill that elevates the Director of the Indian Health Service to Assistant Secretary for Indian Health and the House has it now. Also up for reauthorization this year, The Indian Child Protection and Family Violence Prevention Act assists tribes in reducing child abuse in their communities. The Senate is considering amendments to the Homeland Security Act of 2002 which will recognize that Indian tribes as first responders in emergency and critical situations as entities consulted with regarding homeland security matters. Finally, Congress will be considering several different bills regarding Indian trust management and probate issues. These are just a few of the Indian issues that Congress will address in 2004. It is also worth noting that several Indian bills became law during the 1st Session of this Congress in 2003. The Native American Housing Assistance and Self-Determination Act Amendments passed in November re-authorizes the act through 2007 and requires recognition of tribal self-governance. In December, Congress passed the Indian Financing Amendments Act of 2002 directing the Secretary of the Interior to establish a secondary market for loans issued under the Indian Loan Guaranty Fund; to increase the loan insurance limits from $100,000 to $250,000; and to extend full faith and credit to future guaranteed loans.

What does all this mean? It means we are busy here doing what is necessary for the Chickasaw Nation to be independently strong and involved. As always, with the assistance of Libby Rodike Washburn and the rest of my competent and capable staff, I will continue to keep you informed about what is happening in Washington, D.C.

Oh yes, the recent reports of my demise were premature but there are certain isolated moments when I’d swear I do hear noises from the other side! Meanwhile, register to vote and then do it. Trust me, each vote counts. Remember: just one year from today, January 20, 2005, some person will be sworn in as the next president of the United States! It’s going to be a bumpy ride!

Happy 2004!
On staff at prestigious M.D. Anderson Cancer Center

Chickasaw physician dedicated to cancer research

Jonathan C. Trent, II

Jonathan C. Trent, II, like many college freshmen, was not quite sure what he wanted to study when he entered South- eastern Oklahoma State University. But before he graduated from SOSU in 1988 he was well on his way to an education that would land him a career on the cutting edge of cancer research.

Jonathan Trent II was born in Atoka, Oklahoma and graduated from Midwest City (OK) High School. He is the son of Jonathan C. Trent and the great-grandson of Chickasaw original enrollee Sophie Edna Franklin, of Calhoun.

Jonathan Trent II, who earned a Bachelor of Science from SOSU and an M.D. and Ph.D. from the University of Texas Health Science Center, combines the roles of researcher, doctor and teacher at M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston, one of the top cancer research centers in the country. “I have several clinical and laboratory research projects and some educational projects. The clinical projects are in the way of clinical trials,” said Dr. Trent. “We have therapies available here that are in development to fight the type of cancer known as sarcoma. So patients who don’t have any other therapy options and no other doctors are willing to treat them come here.”

“In the context of the research portion, I explain the clinical trial and the nature of the new drugs that we’re developing. And if they’re interested, then they participate in the trials and we treat them with some of these new drugs in hopes of curing their cancer.”

Because there are so many types of cancer, much of this research with “new drugs” actually involves testing new uses of existing drugs.

“The drugs we’re using, the chemotherapy and the novel drugs that we’re using, are usually not drugs that have never before been used in people,” said Dr. Trent. “Some of them have been used in other types of cancer.

“One of the drugs I’m using right now is called Gleevec. And it’s been used successfully in melanoma and in some types of lymphoma. But it’s never before been used in sarcoma. But it’s very safe and it has a proven track record in these other types of cancers. So we know that it’s safe for people to take.”

Dr. Trent’s research also includes testing a drug called Gleevac, which is seen as a very significant breakthrough in treating certain types of cancer.

“Before the use of this drug, before we developed it, there was only about a five percent chance of a patient’s tumor shrinking from chemotherapy. Meaning that 95 percent of the time, even though you were giving a patient chemotherapy, 95 percent of the time, the tumor kept growing, doubling in size and growing,” said Dr. Trent. “But with this new drug that we’ve developed in the last three years...”

Triennial Business Revenues Continue Climb, Bank2 Capitalization Increased

FINANCIAL REPORT

The triennial government cap- tions include the tribe’s gen- eral fund and the tribe’s BIA trust funds. The Chickasaw Businesses include all of the businesses and operations of the Chickasaw Enterprises. Not included in the financial statements are federally or state funded programs and/or grants and the financial statements of Bank 2 and Chicka- saw Industries, Inc.

The growing needs of the businesses are taken into ac- count when determining the transfers from the businesses to the general fund. It is vital to the long range mission of the Chickasaw Nation that the businesses continue to grow and diversify.

Revenues of the tribal op- eration, other than the transfer from businesses, include sales taxes from the businesses, mort- ture, settlement funds and investment income. Chicka- saw Businesses revenues include gaming revenues net of prizes, sales, re- sell, travel plazas and tobacco stores, rent and invest- ment income.

Triennial expenditures are clas- sified by function. General government includes the elec- tion commission, management and operations of tribal prop- erty, Chickasaw Times and

Tribal Government Revenues and trans- fers from the business- es totaled $2.8 million for the month and $9.0 million for the year which in- cludes a special transfer for $2.5 million from enterprise for culture center construction.

Expenditures for the month were $2.1 million which in- cludes $1.0 million as additional capital for Bank 2 and $4.4 mil- lion for the year to date which is slightly less than budget. Expenditures for construction of fixed assets total $820,000 for the month and $1.1 million for the year to date. Expenditure for fixed assets are included in fixed assets.

Chickasaw Businesses Revenue net of gaming prizes total $37.7 million. Net income before the transfers to the Tribal Government was $26.9 million for the year to date and was bet- ter than budget. Expenditures for fixed asset were $4.0 mil- lion for the month and $10.0 million year to date.

Statement of Net Assets

At December 31, 2003, the tribal government funds had $29.7 million in cash and investments. Of this amount, $5.1 million is in the BIA Trust fund and $13.6 million is reserved for con- struction projects approved by the legislature.

The businesses had $37.3 million in cash and invest- ments of which $12.7 million is for accounts payable and $20 million is reserved for rein- vestment in pres- ent and new busi- nesses.

As of December 31, 2003, tribe op- erations had assets totaling $175.2 million with $12.9 million in payables resulting in net as- sets of $162.3 mil- lion compared to $142.7 million at the beginning of the year or an increase of $19.6 million.
Olivia Anna Greenwood celebrated her first birthday, Saturday, January 3, 2004 with a princess party at her home in Norman, Okla. Livy is the daughter of Lynn Gray and Dewayne Greenwood and the sister of Jackson and Kyle all of Norman. She is the granddaughter of Patricia Mills, Socorro, N.M., Waylon Simpson, Aurora, Colo., Geraldine Greenwood, Latta, Okla., and the late Virgil Greenwood.

Livy’s cake was pink and white, decorated with a crown and a scepter. She wore the crown and guests wore party hats and blew whistles. Cake and ice cream was served along with finger foods and drinks. Gifts were opened as the celebration continued.

Special guests were Nuk Greenwood, Ada, Okla., Toby Catron, Amanda Mascote, Tishomingo, Okla., Gil Hodges, Ada, Okla., and Kristin Hodges, Dallas, Texas.

Chickasaw couple ordained pastors at Tishomingo church

The Monetathchis began their ministry in 1990 at the First Indian Baptist Church in Tishomingo. The couple later served as youth leaders under Pastor Charlie Carter at Temple of God Church in Connerville, Okla.; youth leaders under Pastors Nelson Baken and Jerry Imotichey at Freedom Fellowship in Fillmore, Okla.; and children’s pastor at Grace Freewill Baptist Church in Oklahoma City; and youth pastors at First Freewill Baptist church in Purcell, Okla.

The Monetathchis have also conducted numerous youth revival meetings in Oklahoma, Arizona and Missouri.

Despite moving north, Rev. Monetathchi has kept close ties with Tishomingo. He has served as chairperson for the Chickasaw Nation Annual Meeting and Festival’s Youth Night, providing positive entertainment for area youth through testimonies, Christian rock music, games and dramas.

Youth Night is an awesome tool for encouraging young people,” Rev. Monetathchi said. “Youth Night brings together area youth groups pushing attendance to more than 300.”

The Monetathchis’ youth pastor position at Temple of God Church brought them back to Tishomingo again in 1999.

“Serving again at Temple of God under the leadership of Rev. Nelson Baken was a big honor,” Rev. Monetathchi said. “Rev. Baken had a huge heart for the young people. Our four years at Temple was the most wonderful and growing time for the ministry and for our own hearts.”

The couple was instrumental in founding Temple of God Youth (TOGY) ministries in Connerville in 2000. The Monetathchis watched the ministry grow to an average of more than 80 students per service. A TOGY leadership team was formed to oversee outreachs and missions. TOGY also developed a youth led drama team and Christian rock band, Pulse 39.

“We have always tried to stay on the cutting edge of ministry,” Rev. Monetathchi said. “Jesus brought us this wonderful Gospel to share, our methods may be different but the message is still preaching the Gospel to all that will hear.”

Chickasaw man appointed to Mid-America Indian Center

WICHITA, Kan. - Patrick Kennedy, a Chickasaw, has been recently appointed to serve on The Board of Trustees for The Mid-America all Indian Center Inc., in Wichita.

Kennedy’s grandfather and great-grandmother, original Chickasaw enrollees, lived in the Ada, Okla., area their entire lives. His cousin, Mary Jo Green, is a well-known figure as a Chickasaw legislator and respected elder. His uncle “Curt” Kennedy was the most decorated amateur and professional boxer in Chickasaw and Choctaw history and his father, the late William “Bill” Kennedy, was a decorated WWII Navy Veteran, community leader, and respected elder as well. Patrick’s great-great-grandmother’s name was Mary Ann Cheadle (Walker-Moncrief-Johnston). Kennedy’s family is on the Clan Okla.-la-fa-lay-a and the Chickasaw House of Cush-ke-re.

Kennedy says his new position “is a great honor” and that he hopes to help the center thrive from community involvement of all Indigenous peoples representing the many tribal nations in the south central Kansas Region. The Mid-America All Indian Center Inc., a nonprofit organization, has a vital role for the American Indian community in south central Kansas since its inception in 1969 from many great visionaries such as Mr. Jay R. Hunter, Mr. Blackbear Bosin, and Mr. Calvin Chisholm. The Center works hard to uphold its mission statement of preserving the past yet securing a social and economical future while providing education about our culture and heritage.

“We continue to struggle but have excellent resources in our people, Kennedy said. “I believe with the willingness to communicate positively as well as understanding and respect for all; we as a people...a nation...will progress to live our traditions each and every day.”

On November 24, 2003 Surgeon General Richard Carmona visited the Mid-American All Indian Center while on his nationwide campaign The Diabetes Awareness Program. Kennedy, a peacetime U.S. Navy veteran, presented him with a Pendleton blanket in the old Native tradition.

“What an honor it was for me to meet this man, Kennedy said. My family has a high rate of diabetes like many other native families and I feel it is very important to spread awareness of the dangers of diabetes and how we can lessen our chance of becoming diabetic.”

Kennedy is a survivor of chronic hepatitis C and has undergone intensive chemotherapy to help slow the virus. Although he is in need of a liver transplant he perseveres in the traditional Chickasaw way - unconquerable!

Kennedy continues to give much of his time and himself to aiding American Indians. Let’s all congratulate him and wish him a good journey down his new path he walks! You can email Mr. Kennedy at ChickasawWarrior@aol.com or Chickasawwarrior@hotmail.com covered under the compact agreement.

Beyond that, the compact enables the tribes to offer class II and "gray area" (class II and non-class II hybrid) games with the legal certainty they will remain legal under the terms of the compact. Rolton will be a provision added at Governor Anoatubby’s request that enables tribes to have their class II games come under the compact as covered games without being assessed. This provision was added because a case now under consideration by the U.S. Supreme Court could potentially require tribes to compete with the state to operate class II games. Gov. Henry congratulated all those involved in crafting the agreement.

> I want to commend all of those who helped make this historic agreement possible, particularly tribal leaders, with the Gov. Henry said. "The leaders of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, Chief Greg Pyle and Governor Bill Anoatubby, also deserve special recognition for their help."

With all the success the Chickasaw Nation has enjoyed with Class II gaming, some may wonder why the tribe would negotiate a compact agreement with the state to assess a portion of revenues generated under the compact. The compact allows tribes to offer games that are currently offered will be assessed under the agreement. No Class II games currently under a compact agreement will be assessed. Class II gaming includes card games which the house has a financial stake in the outcome. Class II gaming provides protected operation of class II games.

Tribes in Oklahoma may currently offer Class II gaming under a compact with the state. Class II gaming includes card games in which the house has no financial stake in the outcome and electronic aids to such games. While that may sound simple enough, once attorneys, judges and regulatory commissions get involved, the definition of what constitutes an electronic aid to bingo or similar games can become very complicated. Therefore, several electronic games have fallen into a "gray area" between Class II and Class III gaming with final determination of their status to be eventually worked out in the courts.

The compact allows tribes to offer games that currently fall into the "gray area" and provide for an assessment to be paid to the state on those games. Class II games currently in use by the tribes do not fall under the compact and no assessment is imposed on those games. In addition, the compact ensures protected operation of Class II gaming. This is necessary because two federal laws, the Johnson Act and the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act, may be in conflict. While the IGRA allows tribal gaming to take place in most states without a compact, the Johnson Act is restrictive regarding gaming devices in Indian country. There is a provision in the IGRA that specifically exempts Indian gaming conducted under a compact between the tribe and the state. The IGRA, however, does not specifically exempt from the Johnson Act Class II gaming without a compact.

While several circuit court opinions have stated Class II gaming conducted without a compact cannot be prosecuted under the Johnson Act, those decisions are currently under review by the U.S. Supreme Court. For that reason, a provision in the new compact agreement allows tribes to include Class II games operated by tribes under the compact with out subjecting those games to taxation by the state. This gives tribes the legal certainty that a

Indian Gaming Regulatory Act

Passed in 1988, the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act (IGRA) defines three types of gaming - Class I, Class II and Class III - that are subject to the Act.

Class I is defined as social games with minimal prizes or traditional forms of Indian gaming. Indian tribes have exclusive jurisdiction over Class I games.

Class II is defined as bingo or games similar to bingo as well as non-banked card games that are not specifically prohibited by the state. Electronic aids to Class II games are permitted under IGRA.

Class II games currently fall under the jurisdiction of tribes as long as the state allows other persons or organizations to conduct similar games. However, the National Indian Gaming Regulatory Commission is involved in the determination of whether a particular game is Class I, Class II, or Class III.

Class III gaming is basically everything else, including slot machines, banked card games such as blackjack, where players compete against the house and the house has a financial stake in the outcome. Class III also includes roulette and other table games such as craps. Class III games are only allowed if the tribe has a compact with the state allowing the operation of such games. Major leaguers, college coaches offer valuable hints

Tribe’s baseball camp a ‘hit’ with Chickasaw ballplayers

More than 120 Chickasaw students ages nine to 18 enjoyed two days of intensive baseball training from some of the top names in the sport at the Chickasaw Nation Winter Baseball Camp, one of the largest camps of its kind in the country.

Several Major League Baseball players and coaches, along with college coaches, coordinated the camp. Seattle Mariners pitcher Aaron Loooper joined coaches and scouts from the Texas Rangers, Cincinnati Reds, Pittsburgh Pirates, Colorado Rockies, University of Oklahoma, University of Texas and several other teams to offer instruction at the free camp Dec. 22-23 at the Ardmore (OK) High School baseball facility.

“This might be the most talented staff I’ve ever been around in any camp, and I’ve done probably a thousand camps,” said Tom Holliday, University of Texas assistant coach. “It’s a compliment to the people that organized it and structured it. I think it’s a great deal for kids. This has got to be the greatest Christmas gift these kids could possibly get this year.”

In addition to the high level of instruction, each student also received a monogrammed bat bag, two camp shirts and a baseball cap.

“We want these young men to leave this camp with something that will last the rest of their lives,” said Chickasaw Nation Gov. Bill Anoatubby. “We hope they leave knowing more about the game of baseball, of course. We also hope they learn things that will help them develop strength of character and perseverance that will carry over into other areas of life.”

Dave Holliday, the keynote speaker at the Monday night banquet for players and family, spoke of the things a scout looks for in a player. He said that scouts look for a person of good character who works hard, is reliable and can make others better. He also stressed the importance of education, telling the students that “if you fail in the classroom, you’ll find a way to fail on the field.”

After graduation ceremonies, Dave Holliday said he was also impressed with the overall quality of the camp.

“I was under the impression we were going to have our run-of-the-mill four sessions and try to cram some baseball in,” said Dave. “But to have all the auxiliary things that were put on, with the kids getting t-shirts and hats and having a dinner last night with parents in attendance I thought it was a very unique opportunity for them.

“The kids were much better (than those at most camps). Their level of play was better than I expected and they were very attentive and respectful to the coaches for the most part, which really allows the camp to flow. When you told them to listen up, they did. They were pretty good.”

Seattle Mariners pitcher Aar- on Loooper, who graduated from Byng (OK) High School, said he was glad to give something back to the students at the camp.

“The older you get the more you learn, and I think part of your responsibility as a baseball player is to pass that on to the younger generation so they’ll have that knowledge,” said Loooper. “They were a really good group. I think they got quite a bit out of it. I had a great time and I hope we can do it again next year.”

Ashdon L Vance of Durant, Okla., was named Most Valuable Player during graduation ceremonies Tuesday, Dec. 23. Awards were also presented to best camper and most improved on each of 11 teams at the camp.

Twins: Best Camper - Chad Colbert of Allen. Most Improved - Kelsey Smith of Sulphur.

Red Sox: Best Camper - Larry Wright of Durant. Most Improved - Broderick Bumpass of Wynnewood.

Chickasaw physician sought opportunities to learn from the best

Jonathan Trent is living proof that you don’t have to choose a career path early in life to be a success. After graduating from high school, Trent was unsure where he wanted to attend college. He finally decided to attend SOSU because he was awarded a Parsons Scholarship that would go a long way toward funding his education.

He now believes that decision was one of the best he ever made, because it triggered a series of events that culminated in his current career as a cancer researcher and assistant professor at M.D. Anderson Cancer Center.

“It’s like stacking all the dominoes up,” said Dr. Trent, who is not only a medical doctor, but has also earned a Ph.D. in chemistry. “One thing happens, one domino falls and it hits the next domino.”

“I hadn’t been awarded that Parsons Scholarship I probably would have went to a different school. I don’t know where I would have went. Probably I would have went to the University of Oklahoma on a Navy ROTC deal. Then who knows what would have happened. I may have been off in a submainine somewhere.”

While Dr. Trent was still not sure what he wanted to study when he entered Southeastern Oklahoma State University, he had his eyes open for opportunities and a desire to learn from the best.

He looked at Southeastern and they had a very strong chemistry program. “I didn’t necessarily want to do chemistry, but I wanted to be taught well by good teachers,” said Dr. Trent.

“So I ended up majoring in chemistry there because they had an excellent chemistry department. That was a major decision in my life.”

“When I came to medical school in Houston, probably the most outstanding hospital I have ever seen is M.D. Anderson Cancer Center. I come to M.D. Anderson Cancer Center because of the other people that were involved with to make all that happen to you. You can possibly do in everything, and do the absolute best that you can do.”

He now believes that decision was one of the best he ever made. While Dr. Trent advocates striving to succeed, he also realizes the importance of finding a balance in your activities. “It doesn’t make sense to stay away from great people, you should try to learn from them and their history and experiences and let them help you.”

Another decision, made earlier in life, however, is also a very important factor in explaining his success. “I looked at Southeastern and I probably would have went to a different school. It was rare that I was the best student in any of my classes in high school and in college, but I always wanted to be the best student. Even though I knew most of the time I wasn’t, or wouldn’t be. I just pushed myself to do the best.”

While Dr. Trent advocates striving to succeed, he also realizes the importance of finding a balance in your activities. “I think it’s good to be well-rounded also,” said Dr. Trent. “To play sports, be involved in your community and be involved in church. And all those things are productive, and good things will happen to you if you stay involved in those things. I think staying involved and active in good things will help you.”

“Doing things like hanging out - everybody hangs out and everybody goes to parties and things like that, But that’s not going to help you out 10 years from now or 15 years from now when you’re developing your life. I think working hard and staying in school is very important.”

Parsons Scholars Program genesis for Honors Program at SOSU

The Southeastern Oklahoma State University (SOSU) Honors Program has been built on the foundation created by the Parsons Scholars Program which has a long and honorable tradition at Southeastern. The Parsons Scholars Program was established in 1978 by Dr. David L. Parsons, who earned a Bachelor of Arts degree from Southeastern in 1928 before going on to earn a Ph.D. from the University of Oklahoma.

Dr. Parsons believed that should have the opportunity to continue their education at SOSU. He also believed these students should have scholarly experiences which challenge them to become leaders in our society. The Honors Program will continue to meet those goals and honor the legacy of Dr. Parsons.

For additional information, please contact the Honors Program, University Center, Room 221, (580) 745-2771 or e-mail sosu_honors@sosu.edu.

Chickasaw Student Art Exhibit Set

ADA, Okla. - In recognition of National Youth Art Month in March, the Chickasaw Nation After School Arts Program will be exhibiting photographs.

Students have been taking pictures of the Chickasaw Nation to create a collage which will be entered in a state-wide contest. The theme is “Our Town, Where We Live, Learn, Work, Play and Play.”

Students will select a few pictures from the collage project to be showcased in a photo exhibit “What the Chickasaw Nation Is to Me - 2004 College Photo Work,” according to Arts in Education Manager Laura Stewart.

The photo exhibit will be on display March 5, 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. at the Division of Arts and Humanities Building, 915 N. Mississippi in Ada.

Tribal Drug Elimination program has positive impact

Despite a loss of federal funding through the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Chickasaw Nation Division of Housing Drug Elimination Program will continue to offer a variety of services designed to discourage, reduce or eliminate drug use or violent crime.

While lack of effectiveness was cited as a reason for discontinuing the program at the national level, the Chickasaw Nation program, which was recognized at HUD’s 2000 best practices symposium for its exemplary performance, has been so successful that the program will be continued, supported by tribal resources.

“Our Drug Elimination program uses a very effective three-pronged approach,” said Chickasaw Nation Gov. Bill Anoatubby. “We not only provide education and support services to help youth and adults avoid drug abuse, we also provide services to help them reach their academic and career goals. Beyond that, participants in the program are involved in group activities that help create a real sense of community.”

Full time coordinators and part-time staff work at community centers in Chickasaw Hills, Campbell Acres and Woodbrook Estates providing a variety of educational and recreational activities designed to help youth and adults maintain a positive, drug-free lifestyle.

Educational materials on the dangers of drug abuse are coupled with documentaries of Native Americans struggling with drug abuse in a strategy that has proven effective in helping students resist the temptation to abuse drugs.

Teens and adults can also receive assistance preparing for GED and college entrance exams as well as job search assistance. Each community center is equipped with several new computers and other educational materials selected with the assistance of educators in the area.

Supervised Internet access is also available at each site to facilitate student research and job search activities.

The Drug Elimination program also participates in community clean up and beautification projects, graffiti paint outs, and other activities.

“Our youth assist Red Cross in gathering canned foods, winter coats, fans, and delivering beds to the needy,” said Billy Ward, who heads up the program.

“In 2003, our youth were recognized for volunteering their time to deliver four complete beds to needy families and assisting with junior life guard trainings.”

A number of incentives are offered to encourage youth to participate in the weekly drug abuse prevention classes.

Youth who earn enough points by participating in drug education and prevention programs are rewarded with monthly or quarterly trips. Participants have made trips to see Texas Rangers baseball games, to the Oklahoma City Zoo, Whitewater Bay water park, Six Flags over Texas and a number of other premier attractions in the area.

Regular school attendance, good grades and good manners can also earn students prizes, including movie passes, skating passes, bowling passes, free pizza coupons and the like.

Participation in individual and team sports is also strongly encouraged and funding is available for sports instruction, youth sports leagues, equipment purchases, karate fees, YMCA membership and Boys & Girls Club memberships.

Students also participate in the Ada Police Department’s Drug Abuse Resistance Education program and the Bureau of Indian Affairs Gang Resistance Education and Training Program. In addition, the youth have toured a number of Oklahoma correctional facilities and participated in the “Scarred Straight” program, which allows inmates to speak one on one with students about the realities of prison life.

“During one of the prison tours, several of our students recognized a couple of local teenage boys who were incarcerated for their role in a robbery,” said Ward. “That made quite an impact.”

Chickasaw AARP installs officers for 2004 terms

Chickasaw AARP Chapter 4113 conducted it’s regular monthly meeting December 19, 2003. At the December meeting new AARP officers for the year 2004 were installed by Mary Jo Green. The 2004 AARP officers are, president Jeanne Coplin, vice president Alice Phillips, secretary Bernice Colbert and treasurer Sophia Perry.

The newly elected officers conducted their first meeting of 2004 on January 15 with Dr. Judy Gosforth Parker speaking on the accomplishments of the National Diabetes Board, of which Dr. Parker is a member.

The December 19, 2003 meeting came to order under the direction of 2003 AARP president Overton Buck Cheadle. Mrs. Green opened the meeting with prayer, followed by reports from the secretary and the treasurer.

President Buck Cheadle introduced the speaker for the last meeting of 2003, Dr. Doug Weirick, professor of the department of Health and Environment at East Central University, Ada, Okla. Dr. Weirick spoke on the importance of recycling.

Recycling extends the use of city landfills. The present rate of usage at the Ada, Okla., landfill will reach its capacity in six to seven years.

There are three recycling locations in the Ada area; 326 E. Main St.; on the west side of town at the corner of Sixth and Stockton; and Wal Mart Supercenter located on the north side of the store.

The question was asked what happens when the landfills is full? A new landfill will have to be purchased or our waste shipped out of state, which would be costly.

Papers, magazines, aluminum and cardboard can and should be dropped off at any of the three recycling locations.

Some recycling statistics were shared by Dr. Weirick for the past several years. People are recycling more and it has grown, we can all do better. Last year 2 million computers were thrown away. Dr. Weirick complemented the Chickasaw Nation for the refurbishing of computers to be distributed to elderly and to students. There is a hope and a plan for more recycling of computers.

Mr. Cheadle thanked Dr. Weirick for the valuable information he provided.

The meeting was adjourned and the project of helping a family of eight children was worked on. Presents of clothing and toys were purchased by Laruth Meeks, Lahoma Presley and Sophia Perry. The gifts were wrapped and delivered later that day.

Each year the Chickasaw AARP chooses a worthwhile project. These are paid for by dues and donations. The Chickasaw Nation was the first Native American chapter in 1986 the same year they received their charter. In 1988 Overton Buck Cheadle was able to secure the chapter name Chickasaw. AARP dues are due each January. The dues are $1 plus the dues card from National AARP.

All races are welcome to join in the many worthwhile projects. The Chickasaw AARP meets the third Thursday of each month in the Ada Senior Citizens dining room at 12:15. Visitors are welcome. Informative speakers are at every meeting.

Native American Vo-Tech and Career Day scheduled at Pontotoc Vo-Tech

ADA, Okla. - Russ Peak, who has performed at high schools and colleges from coast to coast, will bring his unique blend of humor, “magic,” and motivation to the Native American Vo-Tech and Career Day Wednesday, Feb. 25 at the Pontotoc Technology Center in Ada.

More than 200 students are expected to attend the event sponsored by the Chickasaw Nation and the Pontotoc Technology Center, where Peak will use interactive demonstrations to teach the audience “if you put your mind to it, anything is possible.”

In addition, participants will have the opportunity to explore a variety of career paths, including business information technology, health sciences, aviation maintenance, graphic arts, cosmetology, automotive services, electronics and computer repair and more.

“This event is designed to inspire young people to set high goals and to give them the information to help them make those goals a reality,” said Chickasaw Nation Gov. Bill Anoatubby.

Various methods of financing an education in the technical fields will also be presented. Information on scholarships, federal financial aid and Chickasaw Nation funding sources will be available.

A session titled “Making the College Connection” will teach students how technology education hours can be used toward college credits.

Indian Health Service Scholarships available

Applications are now available for Indian Health Service scholarships for the 2004-2005 academic year.

These scholarships are highly competitive and pay tuition, fees and other reasonable costs, including books, as well as a tutorial allowance of up to $400 per academic year.

The scholarships also provide a monthly stipend to cover living expenses and offer the option of employment with the IHS during the summer months.

Three different scholarship programs are available for select Native American students.

Preparatory scholarships are available for students pursuing a general education curriculum at a college or university that will prepare them for acceptance into a health profession school.

Pre-graduate scholarships are available for students pursuing a bachelor’s degree in pre-medicine or pre-dentistry.

Health professions scholarships, which include a service obligation of up to four years, are available for students enrolled in an accredited school pursuing a course of study in specific health professions.

The deadline to return scholarship applications is Feb. 28, 2004.

Chickasaw History Quiz

by Richard Green

1. A provision of the removal treaty at Pontotoc in 1832 said that removal could not be carried out until the tribe had found a suitable home west of the Mississippi River. The Chickasaws sent out exploring parties from 1833 to 1837. Where was the first acceptable land located?

A. northwest Arkansas
B. east Texas
C. south-central Indian Territory
D. the Memphis, TN area

2. Sixty years after the first Chickasaws were removed from their ancient homeland to Indian Territory, the tribal leadership met with agents of the United States and the Choctaw leadership to negotiate the terms for the dissolution of the tribes. Where did this momentous meeting take place?

A. Washington, D.C.
B. Fort Smith, Arkansas.
C. Tuskahoma.
D. Atoka

3. James Colbert was born about 1721 in either Scotland or Carolina before coming to the Chickasaw Nation after 1736. He had three Chickasaw wives and fathered several children, some of whom became great tribal leaders. Which one of the following roles did James Colbert not play?

A. Translator
B. School teacher
C. Trader
D. Tribal leader

4. In the 1950s, name the number one bone of contention between the Governor of the Chickasaw Nation and the rank and file tribal members living in the counties that made up the Chickasaw Nation.

A. Per capita payments owed to tribal members.
B. Whether the governor should be elected by tribal membership or appointed by the President
C. What to do with Kullihoma, the tribe’s land east of Ada
D. Separate jointly held tribal lands between Chickasaws and Choctaws

We are not mascots and we are not to be honored with a touch-down, homerun or a 3-pt. shot. For so long Native Americans have been stereo-typed and there are people now in this day and time who believe the things they are taught or what they hear. The schools in this state need to realize that these mascots aren’t honoring the Native Americans. Its degrading and we as Native Americans need to stand up and take a stand.

I applaud Mr. Hays for his effort. Its going to take more than one person to stand up and fight for what we believe in. THERE will be people who will disagree with me on this issue or feel that this is a fight that can’t be won. But I truly believe that if this at least lights the fire under someone there will be enough to fight and to stop the degrading of Native Americans as mascots in this state.

Sincerely,
Carolyn Sealy

Letter to the Editor:

I am a Chickasaw living outside the jurisdiction of the Chickasaw Nation but a patriot none the less. I am aware that many Chickasaw live in your coverage area and want to relate an important message for their consideration. The message is that the Chickasaw Nation Legislature is no longer responsive to citizen requests for action.

I attend all Legislative Sessions because I am retired and have the time and interest to do so. I also am a member of the Oklahoma City Chickasaw Community Council and make requests to the Legislature on their behalf. The most important one made is for the Legislature to change the date and time for their sessions from Friday to Saturday. This would allow for more participation for all Chickasaw.

The fourth request was made at the Dec. 19 session and they still will take no action. They were in too much of a hurry to have their Christmas luncheon.

If any who may read this feel that the Chickasaw Legislature should be more open to the citizens, then write, call, e-mail, or talk to their representatives and request the change. It is high time for all citizens to be able to attend and watch their representatives at work on the nation’s business.

Letter to the Editor:

This letter is in response to the letter written in last month’s issue of the Chickasaw Times by Mr. John Hays of Southernmost Oklahoma State University in Weatherford, Okla.

He wrote an apology in regards to the activities of homecoming at the university where students was “over zealous” with the display of various decorations that offended the Native American students of university. The mascot for the university is the Savages.

As a Native American woman I have to give Mr. Hays credit for realizing that these kind of displays at an university are offensive to Native Americans. But it not only happens at the universities. Its the schools and the professional sports that use Native Americans as mascots. When the schools and the team owners are confronted about the use of Native Americans as mascots, they claim that they are simply honoring the Native Americans. If they want to honor us then there are more ways than one to do that very thing.

Letter to the Editor:

To qualify, a high school senior must have an average of above-average academic record, plan to enroll as a full-time student in an agriculture-related academic major in an accredited school, and be committed to pursuing a career in agriculture.

According to Tom Brand, president of the National Association of Farm Broadcasters, “These scholarships will help prepare the next generation of farm producers and leaders.” Applications are currently available through the National Association of Farm broadcasters’ stations and networks, public high schools, FFA chapter advisors, Monsanto field sales representatives, as well as retailers and seed dealers that sell Monsanto products.

The applications are also posted on the following Web sites:
- http://www.monsanto.com
- http://www.nafb.com
- http://www.ffa.org

Application forms must be completed and postmarked by Feb. 15, 2004. Applicants will be notified of the competition results by May 1, 2004.

Monsanto Company is a leading global provider of technology-based solutions and agricultural products that improve farm productivity and food quality.

The National Association of Farm Broadcasters’ member broadcasters are heard on over 2,000 radio stations nationwide as well as over 100 television stations.

Students who have a commitment to agriculture as a career, now have access to new scholarship program.

High school seniors from all 50 states are encouraged to apply for the Commitment to Agriculture scholarship program. Monsanto Company, in collaboration with the National Association of Farm Broadcasters, has awarded 450 students with one-time awards of $1,500 each.

In order to be eligible for one of the awards, the student applicant must come from a farm family and plan to pursue a career in the field of agriculture. The National FFA Organization will organize an impartial selection committee of agricultural educators and industry leaders to select the winners.

“Hard working farm families across the country are the reason the agriculture industry has been a success in the past and will continue to be one in the future. These families serve as a guiding light for students interested in the industry,” said Glenn Stith, vice president of Monsanto U.S. Branded Business, Sales and Marketing.

The scholarship program, established in 1999, is supported by funds received through pre-trial settlements involving seed patent infringement cases and, to date, has awarded 450 students with nearly three-quarters of a million dollars in support for their devotion to the agriculture industry.

The mascot for the university is the Oklahoma City Chickasaw. The most important request to the Legislature on the Oklahoma City Chickasaw Nation’s business. Honor your Graduate
Oral history of Abe Ned, a man of tremendous goodwill

By RICHARD GREEN
Contributing Writer

A full-blood Chickasaw from Coalgate, Mr. Ned was 69 years old in 1968 when this interview took place. At that time, Mr. Ned was working for the Chickasaw Nation on sanitation and adult education programs. He was born and lived his entire life in Oklahoma except for 10 years in Arizona. That would wind up doing so much good for so many Indian people, after an abnormal, loveless childhood, is a testimony to this remarkable person and to his reservoir of goodwill that years of cruelty and deprivation couldn't destroy.

The interview appears in the Dorris Duke Oral History Collection at the University of Oklahoma's Western History Collection in Norman. The transcription was edited to omit some unnecessary words and phrases and to present the chronology of Mr. Ned's life as it unfolded in Oklahoma and Arizona. The oral history also is annotated to provide greater clarity. I was born in Love County in 1899 and went to school there until I was about 10 years old. My mother died when I was 1 year old and my father died until I was about 10 years old. My mother died when I was 17. I was working every winter morning at 4 o'clock and if I wasn't on the wagon feeding the cattle I had to be on horseback rounding up the cattle to be fed. I would work until about 8 a.m. and then walk four miles to school. It was a one room country school. One teacher and 65 or 70 children from primer up to eighth grade. I didn't graduate from the eighth grade until after I left that family. I went to a little public school in Johnston County and I really did learn a lot from that man.

The man who was my guardian died when I was 17. It was planting time. Well, like always, I did all the work and got the corn in and then the family sold the cattle and most of the things. The old lady called me in and told me, "Here is $10. You can take it and go anywhere you want to." Then she took me to the railroad and told me to go, so I left. I knew from an early age that I had a land allotment. But what I didn't know until after the old man died was that he had been leasing my land every year and I never saw a dime of it.

After I graduated from the eighth grade, I attended Murray Agricultural College in Tishomingo and then the Draughon's Business College for a year in Oklahoma City. That was in 1918. Later, I worked in Arizona as a migrant worker, picking cotton, Pima cotton it was, and in the fruit and vegetable fields. Some paid pretty well and some didn't. Usually got paid so much much a bunch, like for carrots, or lug (a big box of fruit).

I met Indians with different tribes, the Apache, Navajo, Pima, Maricopas and Yaqui they were most like Mexicans. In fact, most of them were from Old Mexico. Of course, these big companies at harvesting time would go over into Old Mexico and bring in whole bunches of migrant workers, thinking that they can get them to work for almost nothing, cheap again as the native people. They would ship them in by the carloads. I had to work a lot of 'em when I was working the ice plant. I had about 50 Mexicans under me; they were pretty good workers. We fixed them a place to stay in a big tin building and we had to cooperate with immigration officers a whole lot. A whole lot of them didn't want to go back; they were making more money there then they would be in Old Mexico. Some of them were pretty hard to get along with because they didn't know English, but I didn't have much trouble. They were just like everybody else. You see people like you, some are not friendly and some are grouchy, all such as that. I got along with all of them.

There was also a lot of Indians from eastern Oklahoma out there. Mostly the five civilized tribes. There was more money in Arizona and the Indian people didn't have no hard time getting a job. If I quit one job, I would go to another place and get a job right off and lots of them claim that the Indian people are good workers, and they do most anything they want them to do. That's why they went for the Indians.

The reservation Indians were helped a lot by the government. They clothe them, feed them, they do everything like that for them and they (the Indians) expect they have good schools in Arizona. High school, college...but after they finish school they would go back to the reservations and sit down. Don't want to do anything. Then when the Indians from Oklahoma come out there, they get a good job, office work, field work, and the local Indians don't like it. That's why they don't like the eastern Oklahoma Indians out there.

I went to work for the Seventh Day Adventist Church out there and we were building school, there was a health clinic here (Coalgate) and we had the Talihina hospital and asked all the reservations. The church also paid the teachers to teach these Indian children. And it didn't cost the Indians anything. Then we'd teach them the religious doctrine. They didn't even know anything about it. There was a lot of trouble among the Catholic way. But we had a good turnout whenever we established the school and church there.

The white people got to having singing conventions around in the little towns and a lot of native Indians got to coming. They got to where they could sing real good. Of course, you can take any Indian here in this country (Oklahoma); they are not a one but what can sing.

I finally returned to Oklahoma not because I was homesick but because I had gone to work for an oil company and we had been on strike for about two months. My wife and I had a little money saved and we had this little place in Coalgate. So we came back and fixed up a place. Then I went to work in Coalgate as the custodian at the high school. For fourteen years. That's where I started working with Indian people. I helped the children and their parents and grandparents find their roll numbers for education assistance from the federal government.

I was contacted by Dr. Bailly of the Talihina hospital and asked if I would think about getting involved in the Community Action Programs. After I was elected to the board, I got real active, working with the school boys, the dropouts and I was real proud of what we all accomplished. Later, we organized a health clinic here (Coalgate) and they wanted to get involved in the Community Action Programs. From Coalgate, the drive to the nearest Indian health facility in Talihina or Lawton was about two hours.

Diabetes is a serious problem with Indian people. The doctor recommends a diet but the full through Community Action From Coalgate, the drive to the nearest Indian health facility in Talihina or Lawton was about two hours.

Dental Clinic gives kids something to smile about

ADA, Okla. - For some kids, brushing their teeth is a dreaded task. But the consequences of not brushing can be even more dreadful.

The Carl Albert Indian Health Facility (CAIHF) dental clinic is trying to change those thought patterns in children with prevention programs through the Head Start program.

“Fifty percent of children under four years old have tooth decay and that’s preventable,” CAIHF dental hygienist and Education Coordinator Angie McElrath said.

February is National Children’s Dental Health Month. For McElrath and her fellow dental hygienists, teaching kids the importance of dental hygiene is a year-round job.

Dental screening and prevention programs at the Chickasaw Nation Head Start begin at 18 months old and continue through age five. McElrath screens Head Start students for any signs of tooth decay every three months.

Children showing signs of decay are treated with a fluoride varnish to seal the teeth. McElrath follows up with those children at two weeks and one month to make sure there are no more signs of decay.

The dental clinic introduced Head Start students to a fluoride rinse in 2000. At that time, 80 percent of the children were showing signs of dental decay. In 2002, that number had dropped to 20 percent at the Madill Head Start, McElrath said.

“Education early on is the key,” McElrath said. “And it’s working.”

In addition to screening and treating children more often, the dental clinic is now seeing patients at even younger ages with a well-baby clinic offered every Wednesday. Parents can bring babies nine to 18 months in without an appointment.

Older children who come in for regular check-ups strive to become members of the “No Cavities Club.” If the child doesn’t have any cavities, McElrath takes a picture and posts it in the clinic. The child is also rewarded with a certificate and coupons to McDonald’s and Taco Bell.

McElrath has been rewarded for her efforts, too. Twice she has been recognized by the Oklahoma City Area Dental Clinic for her work with Head Start.

Health Information Management keeps records straight

ADA, Okla. - Medical records can hold the key to diagnosis and treatment for patients. The Health Information Management Department - formerly known as medical records - is the gatekeeper of more than 117,000 active patient charts at Carl Albert Indian Health Facility (CAIHF) in Ada and the four satellite clinics within the Chickasaw Nation.

The 58-member staff is responsible for the release of medical records to patients and physicians.

Patients requesting copies of their medical records must complete a proper authorization form, Health Information Manager Jerri Martin said. Medical record requests for patients 18 and older must be made by the patient.

The Health Information Management Department gets about 300 requests for copies of medical records each month. The requests are processed in 10 to 14 working days, unless there is an emergency, Martin said.

The department also pulls about 400 medical charts a day for walk-in patients and doctors' appointments.

Martin said the department is hoping to implement the electronic health record, which would replace the paper files with computer access to medical records. Birth certificates are already being electronically recorded and sent to the State Department of Vital Statistics at CAIHF.

Medical transcription and diagnosis coding is also carried out through health information management. The department has seven registered health information administrators on staff.

“Having credentialed and knowledgeable staff members allows us to implement the current practices that are set forth by the American Health Information Management Association,” Martin said. “Employing this knowledge in our department, enables our processes to run more effectively and efficiently, which will enhance better patient care for the Chickasaw Nation.”

Staff members retrieve, prepare, code, abstract, and file medical records on about 150,000 outpatients and about 3,000 inpatients per year. Medical coders help build CAIHF’s medical database by diagnosis coding and abstracting information from those medical records into an electronic system.

Lupus affects Native Americans

Lupus support group forms

ADA, Okla. - Attitude is half the battle for Chickasaw Tribal Legislator Mary Jo Green, who has lived with lupus for 30 years now.

With that thought in mind, Green and the Chickasaw Nation Vocational Rehabilitation Program are beginning a lupus support group.

“A growing number of people have lupus and it helps to talk to people,” Green said.

Lupus is a chronic, inflammatory disease in which the body’s immune system attacks healthy tissues and organs. An estimated 1.5 million Americans have lupus, according to the Lupus Foundation of America. The disease affects all races, but it more prevalent in Native Americans.

Support group organizers held the first planning meeting June 29. The Chickasaw Nation is sponsoring the support group. Anyone interested is welcome to attend.

Email scams can appear legitimate

Email users are being bombarded with authentic-looking messages that instruct them to provide information. Internet scammers hunting for personal financial information have a new way to lure unsuspecting victims: They go “phishing.” Individuals who “bite” are exposed to identity theft.

Phishing, also called “carding,” is a high-tech scam that lures users to submit personal information. Scammers receive credit cards using websites and bank account information. Social Security numbers, PINs, usernames, and other sensitive information are obtained through phishing attacks involving the mass distribution of email messages that are designed to look legitimate. A person clicking on a Web link that sends them to a “look-alike” Web site of the legitimate business, but which is in fact, the user thinks is a legitimate service, and obtain credit card numbers. Scammers tell recipients they need to “update” or “validate” their billing information to keep their accounts active, and then direct them to a “look-alike” Web site of the legitimate business, further tricking consumers into thinking they are responding to a bona fide request. By phishing, a scammer submits financial authentication information to what they believe to be their legitimate business address. In fact, it is going to the scammers, who use it to order goods, services, and obtain credit leading to identity theft.

Often phishing spam/scan messages will use legitimate “From” email addresses, logos, and links to businesses such as AOL, PayPal, BestBuy, Earthlink, eBay, and various banks or financial institutions. The message instructs the user to click on a Web link that sends them to a fake Web site where the user is then asked to provide personal information such as name, address, Social Security number, bank or credit card account number, etc. Because these emails look “official,” up to 20% of recipients may respond to them, resulting in financial losses, identity theft, and other fraudulent activity. Ironically, many such bogus emails prey upon consumers’ fear of being exposed to fraud.

To avoid getting caught by one of these scams, the FTC,Working with the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (FINRA), provides this guidance:

• Don’t trust email head- ers, they can easily be forged.
• Avoid filling out forms in email messages. One can’t know with certainty where the data will be sent and the information can make several stops on the way to the recipient.
• If a user clicks on a link in an email message from a company, be aware that many scam artists are making forgeries of company’s sites that look like the real thing. Verify the legitimacy of a Web address with the company directly before submitting any personal information.
• If a user does go to a link offered in an unsolicited email, check to see if there is an ‘s’ after the http in the address, and look at the bottom of the screen that indicates the link is secure and encrypts data. Otherwise, a user should not jump to conclusions that the site is legitimate, an online form that asks a consumer to submit sensitive personal information should always be encrypted. Scam artists are less likely to have encrypted forms, but if they are trying to elicit personal information, they may take every precaution to make consumers believe their site is secure and therefore, legitimate.

If a user has provided their personal information in re- sponse to a phishing email, they should assume that they will become a victim of identity theft. If the user clicks on a link in an email message from a company, be aware that many scam artists are making forgeries of company sites that look like the real thing. Follow the steps indicated in the identity theft victims guide, Fact Sheet 17a Identity Theft: What to do if It Happens to You located at www.privacyrights.org/fs/fs17a.htm. By clicking on given their SSN to the Web site, they should place fraud alerts on your 3 credit reports. If they provided their bank account or credit card number, they should cancel that account and open a new one. For more information about how to protect against scams leading to identity theft, visit www.privacyrights.org/ and other Web Sites noted below.

The identity theft victims guide includes a list of protection from scams about public education and awareness. People can protect themselves by educating themselves and not trusting in everything they read. Always verify the legitimacy of the company providing the information first before acting. A simple phone call may make all the difference.

Always be alert to phishing messages. Reputable companies DO NOT contact their customers and request that they update their files or verify their account or security settings via email.

IHS makes it a policy to immediately investigate any reports of phishing emails or other type of spam that may affect the agency’s reputation/mission and make our patients unsure about their credit or services.

WASHINGTON - U.S. Department of the Interior Secretary Gale A. Norton has appointed Shanhan Campbell as a Commissioner of the Indian Arts and Crafts Board (IACB) and says it is an honor to name someone who “has a strong background in the arts and crafts industry” to the IACB.

Campbell is the owner and director of the nationally recognized Sorrel Sky Gallery in Durango, Colorado. Specializing in fine original Western and Native American art, she brings 14 years of gallery experience to the IACB. Campbell maintains nationwide American Indian connections, professional acquaintances, and first hand experiences in the Indian arts and crafts industry. Her extensive knowledge and experience working for the Smithsonian Institution, in addition to her expertise in art marketing and management, will also be a great asset to the IACB.

Campbell is a strong supporter of the enforcement of the Indian Arts and Crafts Act (the Act), the primary mission of the IACB. A truth-in-advertising law, the Act prohibits the sale, or display for sale, of any art or craft product in a manner that falsely suggests it is Indian produced, an Indian product, or the product of a particular Indigenous tribe. Campbell is committed to ensuring that arts and crafts act in the style of Indian products and marketed truthfully and therefore easily distinguishable from authentic Indian arts and crafts. By confronting issues of misrepresentation in this lucrative industry, Campbell hopes her work with the Act will aid in protecting the integrity of Native American cultural heritage and the economic self-reliance of Tribes and their members.

“Look forward to working with Secretary Norton, key Congressional members, and my fellow Commissioners to promote and expand the integrity and creativity, as well as the inherent cultural benefits and economic success, of individual Indian artists and artisans, Indian owned and operated arts and crafts businesses, and the Indian arts and crafts industry nationwide,” Campbell said.

Listed below are the students from Oklahoma’s Fourth Congressional District who have received nominations to the U.S. Air Force, Merchant Marine, Military and Naval Academies’ entering class of 2004.

The process for receiving a nomination is highly competitive. Nominations are made based on a composite of academic factors including: school records, junior class rank and SAT/ACT scores. They are also selected based on leadership potential, extracurricular activities, athletics, physical fitness and recommendations. The candidates must also complete a personal interview. These requirements ensure a high quality of applicants.

“I am proud of each of these nominees for making it to the first stage of the appointment process. This is truly a great accomplishment,” Congressman Tom Cole said. “Each of these individuals has the potential to win an appointment to the academy and to complete an outstanding military career. These men and women are among the nation’s elite. I admire their willingness to serve their country.”

Listed below are the students who received nominations, their high school, hometowns and academy in which they were nominated. The applicants will now be considered by the respective academy for admission into the school.

1. B. East Texas. The Chickasaw parties that explored land west of the Mississippi River reported that Indian Territory land was not of equal value with the tribe’s land in the Southeast. Then a party that had toured through portions of east Texas concluded that this land would be acceptable and forwarded its report to Washington. East Texas land, however, was unavailable as Texas, which had been part of the Mexican Empire, proclaimed itself a republic in 1836.

2. D. Atoka. Actually, the Atoka Agreement was negotiated and signed in 1835.

3. B, school teacher. Malcolm McGee, who knew Colbert, identified his roles when he was interviewed by a historian in 1840. Too bad that the historian didn’t push Mr. McGee for more information on Colbert. (A paper on McGee’s observations on Colbert and various tribal affairs and events is in the vertical file of the Chickasaw Library in Ada.)

4. B, tribal elections. While each of these issues was discussed at the time, leaders of the grass-roots movement within the old Chickasaw Nation to restore tribal government always presented a request or a petition for tribal elections. This request never got anywhere in the 1950s because the sitting governor, Floyd Maytubby, his friends on the Oklahoma congressional delegation and the BIA opposed an election. As an experienced politician, Maytubby doubtless knew he could not be elected to the post. Much more information about the 1950s’ grass-roots movement to restore tribal government may be found in The Journal of Chickasaw History, volume 1, number 3.
