MISSION

TLU prepares undergraduates academically, spiritually, and socially in a residential community of faith and learning for service and leadership.

ABOUT TLU

Texas Lutheran University is a private, undergraduate university of the liberal arts, sciences and professional studies, affiliated with the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. All faiths are welcome. Founded in 1891 in Brenham, Texas, TLU moved to Seguin in 1912. Enrollment at TLU is approximately 1,300 undergraduate students. The high quality education that TLU provides its students has been recognized repeatedly in U.S. News & World Report's annual ranking of America's best colleges. TLU was recently ranked No. 2 in the 2016 U.S. News rankings for "Best Colleges" in the West.

A message from the President

"This fall we welcomed a near-record freshmen class, up 28% over the the previous year. The combination of innovative change with our long-held commitment to student success is gaining traction, and the goal of reaching an enrollment of 1500 is within reach."

Strategic planning at colleges and universities often is a wasted exercise. A glossy report is produced and introduced with great fanfare, but the content usually is quickly forgotten. The plan gathers dust, and five years later the process repeats itself. Happily, that has not been the case at Texas Lutheran University. Six years ago the Board of Regents adopted Boldly Investing in Lives of Purpose, articulating a vision and goals for TLU. Looking back, many these goals have been met. Specifically,

- the faculty has implemented a new and innovative general education curriculum;
- student research opportunities have greatly expanded;
- retention and graduation rates have increased;
- a new residence hall, Centennial Hall, has improved the experience for first-year students;
- the percentage of students living on campus has increased;
- new academic programs have been added in fields of growing demand—accountancy, nursing, and athletic training;
- the athletic complex, including Bulldog Stadium, has raised enthusiasm, activity and pride for students and alumni;
- planning and fundraising for the Caroline M. Weston Center for the Performing Arts is underway;
- TLU marketing is raising the University's visibility and sharpening our message to prospective students.

These were goals identified in the strategic plan, but there has been much more change that could not have been foreseen six years ago.

Despite the change, TLU has kept the promise to "Boldly Invest" in TLU's future as a residential, faith-based, undergraduate, liberal arts and sciences university. That has not been easy in the post-financial crisis environment. We could have lowered our expectations and played it safe, or chased a different strategy that would have changed the fundamental character and values of Texas Lutheran. Instead, we have stayed true to the strategic plan's vow to "'bet the ranch' on our vital mission."

That strategy, with its accompanying risks, is paying off. This fall we welcomed a near-record freshmen class, up 28% over the previous year. The combination of innovative change with our long-held commitment to student success is gaining traction, and the goal of reaching an enrollment of 1500 is within reach. Thank you for your support and for your faith in TLU's ability to achieve great goals.

Sincerely,

Stuart Dorsey

JAYNELLEN STOKES '13

Jaynellen Stokes '13 is a former rural community health advisor for Peace Corps Benin and is beginning her third year of service in the country's largest city—Cotonou—at the Peace Corps Bureau.

For the majority of Americans, receiving an education is part of growing up. But for adolescent girls in the western African nation of Benin, going to school is often just a dream. Jaynellen Stokes '13 is working to change that. Stokes, a philosophy major, began her Peace Corps service in June 2013 as a rural community health advisor. After living and working in a rural village in central Benin for the past two years, she is beginning her third year of service in the country's largest city—Cotonou—at the Peace Corps Bureau.

In March 2015, President Barack Obama and First Lady Michelle Obama, in collaboration with the Peace Corps, launched the Let Girls Learn initiative—a program designed to increase funding and improve programming activities focused on increasing young girls' access to educational opportunities. A key part of the program is encouraging and supporting community-led solutions to reduce barriers that prevent young girls from completing their education. Benin was chosen as one of 11 pilot countries in Africa.

"As I worked with young women who visited the health center, I discovered how essential girls' education is to improving women's standing in life and the lives of their families," Stokes said. "Peace Corps Benin, and more specifically the Let Girls Learn initiative, focuses on creating activities, clubs, camps, scholarship programs, and internships providing opportunities for young girls to enhance their education, build confidence, learn sex education, develop study skills, learn good health practices, and how to be leaders."

Peace Corps Benin also works with community leaders to promote girls' education and encourage parents in the community to not only allow their daughters to attend school, but to be active participants in their daughters' educations.

Although Stokes and her colleagues are devoted to the education and development of young Beninese women, they often have to find solutions for the cultural challenges the girls encounter every day.

"In general in Benin, teen pregnancy and sexual harassment at school from male teachers and male students are two major challenges Beninese girls face," Stokes said. "These problems stem from the economic hardships that surround them and living in a society that has yet to value a girl's education equal to her boy counterpart. Most of the girls work in the fields with their family, help their mothers cook dinner, wash clothes, fetch water, clean the house, and care for their younger siblings. This gives them less opportunity to study after school or participate in clubs, enticing them to drop out of school, find a husband, and become pregnant. Of course, it is much more complicated than this. But most girls I know, even from a young age, know what the future holds for them and they're never encouraged to dream of something different."

New Scholarships Open Doors, Provide Opportunities For Students

Every year, scholarship recipients have the chance to meet and thank the donors who support their education. The 2015 Scholarship Luncheon, one of the largest gatherings in many years, added 12 new scholarships totaling $388,000. Not only does the luncheon unveil new scholarships, it connects students and their families with donors, alumni, and members of the Board of Regents and the Texas Lutheran University Corporation Board.

Nursing and psychology double major Kassandra Esquibel shared a personal message of gratitude at the event. Her TLU education was possible through scholarships.

"A college education is one of the best ways to improve someone's future, but that doesn't mean it is easy to pay for," Esquibel said. "TLU and the generosity of donors have given me a life I dreamed of for so long. I'm very close to becoming a registered nurse with my Bachelor of Science in Nursing. From the bottom of my heart, thank you. I will accomplish my dreams and it is all because of your support."

Peace Corps Benin also reaches out to young boys and men through trainings called Safe Schools for teachers and community leaders in hopes of decreasing sexual harassment. Camps for young boys focus on sex education, study skills, good health practices, leadership, and their role as men in gender equality, women's empowerment, and sexual harassment.

Although it might be difficult for everyone to live and work in a country like Benin, Stokes said understanding our roles as global citizens is the first step in alleviating these issues.

"Understanding the problems facing other peoples and nations is crucial to bettering the world in which we live," Stokes said. "There aren't a lot of hands-on opportunities for people unless of course someone wants to work abroad in development. However, donating to organizations that work to promote girls' education is important because without funding, the projects would not be implemented."

At Texas Lutheran University, Stokes participated in several study abroad programs. And while studying abroad has cache on a student's resume, she said the knowledge and life skills she gained during her study abroad experiences at TLU directly contributed to how she easily integrated into Beninese culture.

"The summer after my freshman year, I went to Paris on a cultural study abroad and in the summer of 2011, I explored the Czech Republic with Professor Terry Price and six other TLU students," Stokes said. "In the fall semester of my junior year, I studied French language and culture in Paris. I was able to look at problems from different perspectives. I discovered that different ways of doing the same thing doesn't necessarily mean they are better or worse. I gained problem solving skills, communication skills, and what I like to call my 'street smarts.' I became a global citizen more aware of how my actions, lifestyle, and pure existence not only affect my life and the lives of those close to me, but the lives of people everywhere."

Editor's note: Jaynellen Stokes received TLU academic scholarships during her fall and spring semester terms. During summer study abroad, when the TLU academic scholarships were not applicable, she received the TLU Study Abroad Scholarship.
